Pre-test Instructions

You have been accused of having sexual contact or sexual intercourse with someone other than Adam Watson who you have a relationship with, since you committed to each other around March the 12th 2025. This test will ask you about that allegation and if you have been concealing your activities around having sex with others -both men and women- during this period.

For the purposes of this test, the term "sexual contact" with someone can mean any of the following: (a) vaginal sex, (b) oral sex, (c) anal sex, (d) passionate kissing while fondling the sex organs of another person, (e) mutual masturbation, or (f) any other intimate, sexual contact that provides sexual stimulation or climax.

Sexual contact does not mean: (a) flirting, (b) hugging someone, (c) kissing, (d) texting, (e) contacting on social media, or (f) talking, etc.

This test will ask if you had sexual contact or sexual intercourse with someone other than Adam Watson who you have a relationship with, since you committed to each other around March the 12th 2025. This test will ask you about that allegation and if you have been concealing your activities around have sex with others -both men and women- during this period. This test is only concerned with your current significant other.

In this test, there are 3 types of questions. All questions require a True or False response. First, you will be asked if you have had sexual contact or sexual intercourse with someone other than Adam Watson who you have a relationship with, since you committed to each other around March the 12th 2025. This test will ask you about that allegation and if you have been concealing your activities around have sex with others -both men and women- during this period. This test is only concerned with your current significant other. Sexual contact with someone other than Adam Watson, your significant other.

Second, you will also be asked simple math questions. One example is $2 + 2 = 4$. The answer to this question is True. Another example is $3 + 4 = 5$. The answer to this question is False. Do your best to respond accurately to all of the simple math questions.

And, you will be asked questions about yourself that you are REQUIRED to lie about. These "required to lie" questions all start with the phrase "In my entire life as an adult," to help you identify them as questions to which you are REQUIRED to lie. These questions are EQUALLY important to this test.

Truthful people have failed this test because they don't take the "required to lie" questions seriously and they don't pay attention.

An example of a "required to lie" question would be, In my entire life as an adult, I have never broken a rule. Think about a time you broke a rule. Since everyone has broken a rule at some point in life, you should answer "True" to lie about having never broken a rule. You should know you are lying to this question.

Another example of a "required to lie" question would be, In my entire life as an adult, I have lied to cover up a mistake. Think about a time you lied to cover a mistake. Since everyone has lied to cover a mistake, you should answer "False" to deny that you have lied to cover up a mistake. Again, you should know this is a lie.

Another example would be, In my entire life as an adult, I have always been honest. Think about a time you lied about something. Since everyone has told a lie at some point in their life, you would answer "True" to lie about having been honest all of your life. You should be sure you are lying to this question.

These "required to lie" questions will indicate that you can follow instructions. They also test whether your brain and eyes respond appropriately when you know you are lying.

If your body does not respond to the "required to lie" questions, you can't pass the test. You will fail.

If you don't remember to lie, OR your body does not respond properly, the computer will not be able to detect if you are telling the truth about whether or not you have had sexual contact or sexual intercourse with someone other than Adam Watson who you have a relationship with, since you committed to each other around March the 12th 2025. This test will ask you about that allegation and if you have been concealing your activities around have sex with others -both men and women- during this period. This test is only concerned with your current significant other. Sexual contact with someone other than Adam Watson, your significant other.

It is vital that you answer the "required to lie" questions correctly so the computer gets a baseline reaction for times when you are lying. If you miss too many of the "required to lie" questions, you will fail the test, and we will assume that you have had sexual contact or sexual intercourse with someone other than Adam Watson who you have a relationship with, since you committed to each other around March the 12th 2025. This test will ask you about that allegation and if you have been concealing your activities around have sex with others - both men and women- during this period. This test is only concerned with your current significant other. Sexual contact with someone other than Adam Watson, your significant other.

Also, if your body does not respond correctly when you answer these, you will FAIL the test. Please pay attention!

Conclusion

Bodie Chalmers. ("Examinee") took an EyeDetect test entitled "DLC Infidelity - Chalmers " on 5/20/2025 at 03:29 PM which resulted in a "Not Credible" Converus Credibility Score of 1 for the issue of CHALMERS, B Infidelity., which indicates probable involvement or participation.

DISCLAIMERS:

It is strongly recommended that all examinees give their prior written consent before undergoing an EyeDetect evaluation. If consent is not given, results may likely not have utility in taking action where it may be needed.

For best results, it is recommended that organizations treat the information found in this report with discretion and confidentiality and on a need-to-know basis among management. For legal reasons, it is recommended that the examinee not be directly confronted regarding a poor credibility score, but that the information found in the EyeDetect report may be useful for taking preventative and/or corrective action to stop illegal and inappropriate behaviors in personnel.

In some jurisdictions, a lie detection test may not be considered legal evidence to incriminate the person tested.

In screening tests, EyeDetect has an accuracy of 88-91% in correctly classifying examinees as deceptive or credible. In diagnostic tests, the accuracy is 87-89%. As discussed in scientific literature, all lie detection solutions have accuracy rates of less than 100%. If you believe these test results are incorrect, Converus recommends using a secondary method to assess the credibility of the examinee. Other methods such as a polygraph exam, an interview or a drug test, where applicable, can be used to corroborate the results of the EyeDetect test. Depending on the rate of accuracy of the secondary method, the confidence in the outcome of the test results could be as high as 97-99%.

Explanation of Examinee Answers

The “Summary of Examinee Answers” table and “Answer Detail” section below show details and answers the examinee selected for all questions or statements on this test. Answers shaded in green are those expected from an innocent person and indicate denial of participation in the issue in question. Answers shaded in red are those which are contrary to what is expected and indicate the examinee either admitted to participation in the issue, intentionally answered contrary, misunderstood the question, or accidentally selected the unexpected answer. The letters shaded in green and red are the answers selected by the examinee.

Note: A guilty examinee may answer all test questions with the expected answer, but that does not indicate innocence. It only indicates the examinee denied culpability.
